Clarke Gets Three Copies Overseas

Somewhere in Italy, October 31, 1943.

Bulloch Times, Statesboro, Ga.

Dear Mr. Turner:

My brother James took out a subscription for the Bulloch Times to be sent to me several months ago, and I have received only three so far, one while I was in Sicily and two since I have been in Italy. One reason I think is a delicacy in my address. Would appreciate it if you would correct the address and maybe I will get it more often.

I have really enjoyed the few copies I have gotten, because outside of our home mail it's the only news I have of Statesboro and Bulloch county, and I am interested in knowing how everything and everybody is and where all the boys in the service are.

Hoping to receive another copy soon, I remain,

Yours truly,
CLAUDE CLARKE.

Joe Woodcock Is Happy To Get Times

November 10, 1943.

Am just writing you a few lines to let you know that I really enjoy getting the Bulloch Times. If it was not for getting the paper I guess I would get homesick.

I met a girl from Augusta a few days ago. She is with the Red Cross up here. Boy! When we got together only thing we talk about is Georgia and what is happening around there.

It is getting real cold where I am now, snowing a little, but that does not matter. Only thing we guys are wishing for is for this war to end.

I have heard that Jake Smith is close around where I am, but I have not had a chance to find him. Maybe some day I will. Bobby McElmore, I understand, is up here on a tour of some kind.

I guess the town is growing quite a bit now with the airport opened and also with some of the soldiers out at the college.

I would like to tell exactly where I am but the only thing I can say is that I am somewhere up here in Alaska, and also a few other places around here that I would like to say but there is a limit to what we can say.

I guess I will close here, and maybe I will be able—or must I say, have time to write some other time.

Keep sending me the Times, because that and letters from home, well, these two things are the best morale builders there is.

Your sincere friend,
SGT. JOSEPH WOODCOCK.

Guilt Not Proven

THE FRENCHMAN down in Nassau who was acquitted by the jury upon his trial charged with the murder of his father-in-law, has his lucky stars to thank for his release. The jury did not find him innocent, for he was palpably was guilty, but the verdict merely amounted to a finding of "not proven." The jury believed he was guilty, and told him so after giving him release, when it added the request that he be required to move from their midst to spend the remainder of the life they had given him to spend "in the arms of his loving wife."

Now, doesn't that "arms of loving wife" business tend to make you sort of snicker. It was made known in connection with the hearing that DeMarigny had two living wives besides the lovely Miss Oakes with whom he still happens to be living. It was part of the testimony that, after separating from his second wife, he had at intervals relived with her in a way which was resented by the man whom he was charged with having murdered.

Now that DeMarigny has been told to go live his life at some place where he would be more welcome, he turns to his paid attorneys and a mechanical instrument to find for him a verdict which the jury did not return, a verdict of innocence. And what is that mechanical device which points to his innocence? Wouldn't you like to believe in mechanics so all-perfect. A machine which, attached to a man's body, give OK to statements, he is making in his own behalf, and his lawyers and his wife give their added endorsement, and call for a closing of the matter.

An old negro woman was told about the working of a thermos jug. "Whatever you place in the jug," she was told, "will remain in that state for an indefinite period. If you want it to stay hot, it will; if you want it to stay cold, it will." And the old woman was amazed. "It will! I do declare!" she said. "How do you know what you want it to do?"

It's sort of that way with a paid attorney and a mechanical device. They are both easily susceptible to personal influences. The jury trying DeMarigny said to him, "We will give you back to the arms of that third wife, but we ask you and her both to go elsewhere to do the arming." That request ought to be respected.

Where Is Rivalry?

THERE BE THOSE who seek to draw lines between newspapers and the radio as to their comparative value as purveyors of public information. Perhaps judgment in favor of either is more or less influenced by one's relationship in the matter.

As to the public attitude, which serves best depends upon what is meant by the word service. If any person is satisfied with merely flash news, which is subject to inaccuracies of speech, the wrong interpretation of words, or even that element of static which is ever present, the radio might be accepted. If, however, there is required a need for subsequent confirmation, a reference to other published statements or a verification of fact, there is no source which approaches the printed word—a record which can be retained without the inevitable probability of forgetting what was said about what, where it happened and who made it happen.

Radio is highly pleasing to those whose minds are so dependent that they retain indefinitely whatever is offered them, but when it comes to a need to refer back to a matter—well, the radio doesn't compete. Personally we like that part of the news which radio brings us first, but we always want to look at our paper to make sure that what the radio brought us is supported by the printed word.

There is no real rivalry in the news world between newspapers and the radio. It may also be accepted with equal assurance that as an advertising media, the radio is of fleeting value; however, we consent that the business is entitled to spend its advertising money as it wants to spend it, radio or newspaper.

So there need be no rivalry as to that point, either.

Who Are You?

CERTAINLY it is a fast age when people have not the time, nor perhaps the concern to know who they are. As we move along swiftly, it is easy to drop into the conclusion that the past matters not—that the present is the important time, and that even the future is the responsibility of those who come after us.

But time doesn't go that way; it is not broken into sections—yesterday is the foundation upon which rests the bridge of today by which we travel into tomorrow. Even if not interesting, it ought to be important for every person to know as much as possible about the chain of life of which each is a continuing part.

But when we get busy, we neglect; and having neglected, we grow unconcerned and thereby lose full knowledge of our own selves.

Some weeks ago we had occasion to visit at one of the model homes of Bulloch county. The lovely young mother of two bright girls was giving us some information about the building up of the home of which she was so proud. We asked her who was her grandfather, and she casually replied that she had never heard of him; "he had been dead a long time." Last week a youngster in uniform came to this office to subscribe for the paper to be sent to him in service. His face seemed familiar, and his name was more than familiar—it was the same of an honored family with large connection in the county, to which family our own is closely connected. It was Waters. We thought he might be some of our family, and asked him about his ancestry. He told us the name of his father, but when we asked him about his grandfather, he replied, "I don't know; I never heard of him."

This is a mighty busy world—or a mighty indifferent one.

Are Slow to Learn

THOSE YANKS above the Mason & Dixon's line are amazingly slow to learn the mind and intentions of Southern Democrats, but they may eventually learn.

For more than three-quarters of a century we have been seeking to prove our loyalty to the Democratic party and the principles for which democracy is supposed to stand. If you spell Democracy with a capital "D," it refers to the organized party; if you spell it with a lower case "d," it simply refers to the policy of independence of the people to live and think and act sort of like they choose to without dictation from any outside influence. Above the Mason & Dixon line, there appears to be a theory that southern Democracy is an organization of voters who will be happy to jump at the crack of the whip in the hands of a self-superior element with the right to do the thinking for the nation.

We Southern Democrats believe in state's rights to the extent that we object to being directed into any course against our own better judgment as to its final results. We believe, and have grown more determined in this belief as time passes by, that the South's control of internal matters belongs to ourselves; that we who must endure conditions, should prescribe those conditions and control them. We have evolved a system for elections among us of the South which serves to preserve harmony among the people who must live together. As part of that procedure, we have adopted some measure which includes the payment of taxes as a prerequisite to the voting privilege. We insist on that, and we are not going to surrender that right without a fight which will long be remembered.

That is what Democracy means in the South—the right to control our own ways of living and governing.

HOG KILLING ERA IS CLOSE AT HAND

Consumption of Pork in Bulloch County Is Pivotal For Planning of Meals

Hog killing time is nearly here. Pork consumption in Bulloch county is greater than all other meats combined. Acting as a pivot point, furnishes the center around which 70 per cent of the meals are planned in the county.

The principal reason for pork being used more extensively is that hogs are more economically raised, more easily slaughtered and the pork more easily preserved by curing than any other kind of meat, and pork is highly palatable.

Z. A. Massey, animal husbandman at the Georgia Experiment Station, stated while here recently that hogs should not be fed for 34 hours before slaughtered, but should have plenty of fresh water. This aids in dressing and helps to get a good bleed. The animal should not be excited or hot when slaughtered. The temperature of the scalding water should be 150 degrees. To get smooth meat cuts, always let the carcass cool thoroughly before cutting.

Farmers that do not carry their meat to the curing plants, may cure it at home in one of several methods. For a dry cure, to every 100 pounds of meat used, add 8 pounds of salt and 3 ounces of saltpeter, and if a sugar cure is desired, add 3 pounds of brown sugar. Mr. Massey recommended. Mix the ingredients and rub half of the mixture on the meat. Pack in an oak barrel with the skin side down, except the top layer; there put the skin side up. In seven days repack the meat and rub in the other half of the mixture.

The war comes to Elm Street...

Perhaps you think the war doesn't come very close to Elm Street—lots of Elm Streets, all over the U.S.A. Ask Walter Carlsen, the mailman. He knows Elm Street. He knows its broad shade trees. He knows those neat, white cottages and the people in them—people like Mrs. Adams. Sarah Adams was always cheerful—even when her hands reached out so eagerly for those letters from Bob—overseas. You remember Bob—that fine, husky, wide-eyed boy. Doesn't seem 18 months since he went away... Walter Carlsen didn't know about the dreaded telegram that Sarah Adams received, but he will never forget the day he had to deliver that official envelope from Washington. It made him hate his job! In a way Walter is glad that he doesn't see Mrs. Adams every morning any more. He is used to seeing those Blue Star Service Flags on Elm Street. They are plentiful! But the Gold Star in Mrs. Adams' window—

—he can't get used to that. It reminds him that the most he can do isn't enough. It reminds him that the way to Victory will be long and hard. He knows it.

Yes, Walter Carlsen knows how the war comes to Elm Street—lots of Elm Streets all over the U.S.A.

ANOTHER HONOR DUE TO GEORGIAN

Gov. Arnall May Become "Favorite Son" At The Next Party Convention

Atlanta, Nov. 16.—Governor Ellis Arnall, because of his popularity both in and outside his home state, has been mentioned for just about everything in the book. Now they are saying his name possibly will be placed in nomination for the next national Democratic convention.

And on top of that the Georgia party, eager to give Georgians an far-flung battlefields an opportunity to vote in next year's primary, likely will close its entries two months earlier than usual.

These important developments were disclosed by Chairman J. Len Duckworth, who is preparing to call a meeting of the state democratic executive committee before Christmas to adopt new rules and regulations and to provide for the naming of delegates to the national convention.

Governor Arnall would be Georgia's "favorite son" in a play for better patronage treatment for this state at the hands of the national party, it is said. Chairman Duckworth predicted his committee will instruct the Georgia delegation to cast a first ballot for our young governor, who has attained a national reputation during his comparatively short time in office. What Mr. Arnall would do with his following would depend upon whether national party leaders accord Georgia more favorable patronage treatment between now and convention time, Chairman Duckworth believes.

With a large percentage of Georgia voters out of the state, many of them in the armed forces overseas, Chairman Duckworth said he would ask his committee to set the entry date for candidates next year in April or May, instead of in July, thus give the absentee ballots more time to reach here. In the last election some reached here after the election was over as it takes four months to get a ballot to and from the South Pacific islands.

Should the plan develop, Governor Arnall would be the second Georgian in modern history to be accorded a "favorite son" presidential nominee vote. Senator Walter F. George was placed in nomination at the 1928 convention.

ARNALL PRISON PROGRAM GOES ON

Recent Episode at Douglas Camp Not To Hinder Efforts At Prison Reform

Atlanta, Nov. 16.—"The escape of the convicts from the Douglas county camp, with the killing of one of the guards, is no argument against prison reform," declares the Atlanta Journal editorially. "On the contrary, the facts of the matter confirm the desperate need of a clean-up of our penal system."

"Governor Arnall speaks wisely when he says that no matter how much criticism may be heaped on wardens and guards, plans for a complete reformation are going ahead and will continue until the goal is attained."

"Nevertheless it is sad to find, at a time when an earnest and intelligent effort is being made to alleviate the condition of prisoners and install a humane system, there should arise episodes which give encouragement to criticism by the cynical or the self-seeking."

Here's how Governor Arnall expressed himself recently in reiterating his pledge to reform Georgia prisons: "I care not what opposition may develop as to the reform program we have inaugurated and it matters not how many prisoners may seem to prove unworthy or prison officials seem to be dishonest, we shall not let anything deter us in providing a system in Georgia that will work toward rehabilitating men and women who have transgressed the laws instead of conducting prisons that are schools for vice and crime."

Middleground P-T. A.

The Middleground P-T. A. met last Friday with Mrs. John Gay, president, presiding. Mr. Rooks gave the devotional and the sixth and seventh grades assisted the teachers in presenting a program on "Good Homes."

Plans were made for a box supper to be held on Thursday, December 9th. Mrs. Troy Purvis and Miss Alice Jo Lane were appointed to get up the program for that night.

.. Nobody's Business ..

(By GEE MCGEE, Anderson, S. C.)

THE OTHER SIDE OF WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C.—I have been looking "all-over" for the past several days for some of the "bureaucrats" I read so much about before I took up my lodging at the capital. Everybody I have seen looks just like everybody I saw before I saw any of the other folks. They are all human beings just like you and your wife and your son John and his wife, you four and as many more as possible.

I have called upon many of these so-called "bureaucrats," and so far as I can see they are men and women, all trying mightily hard to fill their jobs and render service to their country. They are pleasant to talk to, they are kind and courteous, and the only "crusts" they look like are Democrats. They are a lot worse in some newspapers than they are in the discharge of their duties. Well, I don't know much else to say, except—

If I want a "C" gas card and nobody won't give me nothing but an "A" card, he's a "bureaucrat." If my tax return is hard to make out and my taxes are $25.00 instead of $11.00, some "bureaucrat" is responsible for it. If I have to drive 'way down town to a filing station and have my tires checked and inspected, I ain't willing to blame nobody but some old fogey "bureaucrat," but if some guy gives me a job in some office I never heard of... where I can make a living, he is a Democrat.

And there you are. We all realize that there are lots of useless jobs, positions, commissions, and bureaus in Washington, but you have just as many in proportion in your town and county. So you see it's a sort of a habit to hire folks to work for the public, mumble. And besides that, we are running a war, that is—we are running one today... when this piece is being written... and running one ain't no hay... it takes just endless folks, even if they are "bureaucrats" to run a winning war. The fellows sound much worse in the newspapers and magazines than they do in their respective offices.

THE OTHER SIDE OF WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C.—I am afraid that I sort of hurt a fellow's feelings the other day, but I was only reminding and meant no harm. He doesn't like anybody much that has anything to do with the present (New Deal) administration. I think a bunch of auditors re-negotiated him about ten days ago in the sum of about $11,446.99. He said, "I hope the democratic form of government, which we are now supposed to have in the U. S., won't leave our country in such a mess that we won't be able to work out of it."

What kind of touched him in the wrong spot was my statement, as follows: "Well, I hope they won't leave it in the mess they found it in. Banks busted, cotton mills working half time at half pay rates, cotton fetching only 6c per pound, fat-back meat selling at 5c per pound, farms idle, farmers busted, 16,000,000 people out of work, mules not worth anything from one crop to the next, everybody's credit gone, and no money available to buy stuff even at the lowest prices ever known in our history... corn 40c bushel, wheat 50c bushel, potatoes 10c peck, etc."

He came back weakly and said, "But that was a depression, and we brought it on ourselves. I am afraid that you know very little about how the government is holding the business men's feet to the fire during this war. It won't let us make any money, but expects us to pay taxes and buy bonds." I didn't argue the question with this gentleman, but having been a farmer and a merchant during 1932 and 1933, I know a few things about messes, both financial and political.

THE OTHER SIDE OF WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C.—Dr. F. E. "Doc" Townsend, the originator of the famous "Townsend Plan," is a guest at my hotel. He and I have had several talks. He has given me the history of his life as well as statements leading up to the beginning of his work and methods in operation. This information was verbal or oral, as a school teacher might say.

The Doctor is indeed an interesting character. A fine talker, soft of voice, generous in his references to all people and all things, knows his subjects, and is always able to state specifically what he is driving at and where the money is coming from to drive with. The "Doc" says that if

Frank Smith has found his broiler business very good, especially so when he uses the crossed breeds. Mr. Smith got unusually good gains from his crosses in 1943. He has a good sized flock of laying hens now.

R. C. Roberts, for many years Bulloch's largest poultryman, has 700 layers and selling eggs above 60 cents per dozen. Mr. Roberts was in the poultry business during the first World War and sold eggs as high as 50 cents. He is now selling eggs for more than he did then.

William Smith has several hundred head of cattle and is planning to expand his business in 1944. William was a poultry major while in school at the University of Georgia.

Not but a few years ago Bulloch led the state in chickens, hogs and cattle. About three years ago Taylor county took the poultry lead over Bulloch. With the heavy increase now going on and the possibility of others adding to their flocks, Bulloch may again be the state's number one poultry county in 1944.

Policeman Anderson Nabs Snatch Thief

It was quick work when Policeman Henry Anderson got on trail Sunday of a negro youth who snatched a bag from the arm of a lady on the main streets and ran into hiding.

The lady was Mrs. R. F. Smokes, from Candler county, who was enroute to the bus station from the residence of her sister, Mrs. J. S. Webb. With her were Miss Willette Olliff and Eileen Webb. The negro then unknown, approached and snatched the purse and ran into hiding.

Information given the policeman put him on the lookout, and Monday morning Henry Anderson picked up Willie Green as a suspect. He was later identified by the victim, though the property has not yet been recovered. Green has been working in Savannah in recent weeks, though his home is in Statesboro.

TEN PLANES FLEW, NONE RETURNED

Statesboro Young Aviator Was Among Fatal Squad Who Comprised The Squad

Everybody in this community is familiar, perhaps, with the mysterious disappearance of Bert H. Ramsey Jr., Statesboro young aviator, who, in service overseas, failed to return from a raiding flight. It was in May his parents here were notified that he was missing in action. From that day to the present, no definite word has been heard concerning him.

It will be interesting to our readers to know that young Ramsey was a member of the raiding party about which the story was written which follows:

London, Nov. 12 (UP).—Eleven Marauder bombers started out last May 17 for an attack on an enemy center on Holland. One developed motor trouble and turned back, its crews watching their buddies start off on the bomb run.

That backward glance was the last they ever saw of the formation of ten. Not one came back—a disaster that wrote the first chapter in the ever-glowing story of the B-26 Martin medium bomber in this theater.

The details of the raid were revealed today by the army newspaper, Stars and Stripes. They previously had been held back by censorship and the record was down in official communications only as "ten medium bombers are missing."

The night of May 17, Lieut. Col. Alfred H. von Koltitz, then senior intelligence officer of the group, called in a half dozen key officers. He told them what had happened on the second mission ever performed here by B-26's.

"That's the way it is," he said. "A lot of people are going to be killed. We can hold up or we can take it and go on from here."

The bombers checked from low level, the method used over the Holland objective, to medium level precision attacks. Their crews practiced for two and a half months. They had a new commander, Col. Glenn Nye, of Raleigh, N. C.

On July 21 they tried again. The objective was Tricreville. Results were fair. On August 3 they hit the Le Trait shipyards. It was a good job. That went on the credit side of a ledger now showing 1,400 sorties in six months with a loss of only four planes.

"As marauder fields when anybody says '10 for 10,' the answer is 'Le Trait,'" said the Stars and Stripes, "one of these days the Marauders are going back to pinpoint a target just inside the Dutch coast and blow hell out of it."

ACTIVE WOMAN OPERATES FARM

Mrs. Lester Martin Also Finds Time For Service In Community Enterprises

A Bulloch county home demonstration club member has been doing two man-size jobs since the war began and is making a success of both of them.

In addition to running a home and caring for a family of four, Mrs. Lester Martin is operating a farm of her own, helping her husband with his participating in Red Cross activities, and serving as chairman of the marketing committee of the county home demonstration club.

As chairman of the committee she practices what she preaches by marketing an average of $35 worth of miscellaneous products per week on the curb market here. This consists of fresh vegetables, meat, butter, canned foods and poultry products.

Mrs. Martin runs her own farm separate from her husband's even though she helps him look after his busy acres because he is serving the nation in a vital defense capacity.

On her own farm she has 62 acres in cultivation. During peacetime she had an annual cash income of about $500 in addition to that received from curb market sales. This year she received $150 for calves, $300 for peanuts, $500 for hogs, and $1,100 for tobacco.

In addition to supervising the farm enterprises, Mrs. Martin hasn't let down on her home management duties. She has canned 1,000 quarts of fruits and vegetables this year.

BYRON DYER TELLS ABOUT HOG PRICES

Explains Proposed Plan For Equalization With Chicago Sale Prices

The support price of hogs at Statesboro is considered to be approximately 13 cents above or below $1.75 per hundred that the market in Statesboro is normally above or below the Chicago price for that given season of the year. T. Walter Hughes, Georgia Wood Distributor Administration office, has written.

The normal differential between Statesboro and Chicago will, in general, be considered the basis for fixing the support price of hogs in Statesboro.

Primarily, the price support program is not considered by the government to be an actual market price guarantee, Mr. Hughes pointed out. The support will take the form at present of an educational program to producers outlining and encouraging a method of orderly marketings and a willingness on the part of the government to purchase any surplus of hog products over those needed for civilian and military requirements. These hog products will need to meet government specifications.

The purchase of these surplus hog products will be a price high enough and in a volume sufficient to justify the price of $1.75 or more per hundred at Chicago for live hogs of the classes and weights specified in the program.

The success of the support program to producers will be dependent upon the producers following an orderly system of marketing so as to avoid gluts in the market. The chief reason why prices would go below the support level is that slaughtering facilities would be inadequate to handle the volume of hogs offered on the market. Hog producers should contact the packer or buyer they intend to sell to before marketing their hogs. This is to prevent marketing of hogs at a time when the packing facilities will not be in a position to handle them.

"Stick-With-Us" List Steadily Growing

Added Number of Readers Declare Purpose to Stay When List is Purged

We are nearing the end—and so are some of our readers. The shortened list today reveals that fewer are paying up their arrears, and that is because fewer are in arrears. Within a few weeks we are going to be compelled to trim down to paid-in-advance. There are a few—a very few—who ought to get on the "Stick-With-Us" list before they are stricken off the list.

LUSCIOUS PERSIMMONS FROM LOYAL FRIENDS

Another copious contribution of choice fruits came in yesterday at the hands of our long-time friend, Mrs. C. W. DeLoach, of the Bay District. It was a boxful of Japanese persimmons, soft and sweet, "just ready to eat," she told us. And they were. Six of them filled a shoe box. It has grown to be a habit for these DeLoach friends to bring us persimmons, and it is the habit for us to expect and appreciate them.

VARIED CONTRIBUTION FOR DINNER TODAY

If the editor had gone shopping he would not have made a different choice from that assortment of Thanksgiving "goodies" left at the Times office this week by Mrs. H. G. Lee, valued friend from Stillson. Exalted friend to an editor's palate there were bottles of syrup, sweetened kind of yogurt potatoes and the choicest collards we have ever seen. What a Thanksgiving!
